
Contributors

Vera Hennefeld, Dr., is a sociologist and head of the department ‘Education & Culture’ at CEval GmbH. She is a co-founder of the working group ‘Culture and Cultural Policy’ at the German Evaluation Society (DeGEval) and has been its spokeswoman for many years. The emphasis in her work as a trainer and specialist in monitoring and evaluation is on (foreign) cultural and educational policy, tertiary education institutions and research, international cooperation, and environmental and social affairs.

Wolfgang Meyer, Prof. Dr., is a professor of sociology at Saarland University; coordinator of two evaluation study courses in English (MABLE) and German (MEval); member of the executive committee for the International Program for Development Evaluation Training (IPDET); senior evaluator; specialist in methods, environmental and sustainability issues; and author of numerous teaching books and other publications.

Stefan Silvestrini, Dr., is executive director of CEval GmbH and coordinator of the division ‘development cooperation’. He has a diploma in sociology and did his doctorate on ex-ante evaluation. The emphasis in his research and work in general is on meta-evaluation, impact-oriented monitoring and evaluation capacity development. During his career as an evaluation researcher, which has now lasted for over 20 years, he has planned and implemented more than 200 evaluation and consulting projects.

Reinhard Stockmann, Prof. Dr., is Senior Professor of Sociology, Founder and Director of the Center for Evaluation (CEval), Founder and Editor of the Journal of Evaluation (Zeitschrift für Evaluation), head of the English-language masters study course ‘Evaluation’ (MABLE), and founder member of the German Evaluation Society (DeGEval). He has conducted hundreds of evaluation projects, published several hundred articles and over 30 monographs, and edited more than 20 books, some of which have been translated into six different languages.

Laszlo Szentmarjay, M.A., is project manager at CEval GmbH and former research associate at Saarland University. He is responsible for the conception and implementation of evaluations and M&E systems in the fields of development cooperation, environment and education. He further acts as head of projects for the international continuing education programme IPDET (International Program for Development Evaluation Training). He also carries out research about evaluation and is a lecturer in two evaluation masters’ study programmes.

Janis Wicke, M.A., is a sociologist and evaluator at CEval GmbH. The methodological emphasis in his work is on qualitative data collection and analysis procedures and the combination of qualitative and quantitative methods in complex evaluation designs. In terms of content, he works on development cooperation, agriculture, sustainable supply chains and certification, climate protection, and adaptation to climate change.

Niklas Zierke, M.A., was a research associate at Saarland University from October 2019 until September 2023, lecturer on two evaluation study courses and spokesman for the working group ‘professionalisation’ at the German Evaluation Society (DeGEval). He is an evaluation specialist in the fields of science and development cooperation. His research work concentrates on the comparative analysis of evidence and evaluation in politics and society, the governance of sustainable development, and methods in empirical social research.

